Getting your home safe and ready to bring in a new pet

DONNA HOLE HEAD OF TRADE SERVICES AT HIPAGES

IF you're thinking of welcoming a pet into your home, it's important your place is ready to cater for their needs.

Regardless of the type of pet you have, safety is of utmost importance. The professionals at Purina, a leader in pet care, suggest the first step to getting your home pet-safe is looking at the world through their eyes. Crouching down low or looking up high will give you a view of different areas of the home, perhaps previously overlooked.

Just like you, our pets need ample space to play, grow, explore and be free. If your pet doesn't have a generous amount of room to exhaust themselves, chances are they will seek refuge in the unlikeliest of places.

A well-rested pet makes for a well-rested owner. Your furry friend deserves a place to sleep at night that is well insulated, comfortable and secure.

There is an abundance of pet supplies on offer, ideal for making your pet feel right at home. You can pick up all your pet necessities from your local pet supplies store – a place where every pet-friendly product is available. Remember teething happens to animals too, so it's important they're gnawing on something they should be, rather than a pair of your shoes.
